PRFAQ: Choose your refund after cancellation

Press release

cnftkt now lets you choose how to get your refund when a waitlisted ticket is cancelled

Choose instant wallet money or a bank refund, at the moment you actually need it.

[City, launch date to be decided]: Until now, if your ticket was waitlisted, cnftkt asked where your refund should go right after you booked, often about 30 days before travel, and you couldn't change your answer. If the ticket was cancelled just before your journey, you could be left waiting up to 7 working days for your money, exactly when you needed it to book another trip.

From now on, we no longer ask you at booking. You choose when the ticket is actually cancelled. You'll get an alert, and then pick one of two options:

- cnftkt wallet: instant. Use the money right away, or withdraw it to your bank anytime.
- Original payment source: back to the account or card you paid with, in up to 7 working days.

Neither option is chosen for you, and your refund stays on hold until you decide.

"My ticket was cancelled 8 hours before I had to travel, and my money was stuck in my bank for days. I could have rebooked right away." (Illustrative quote based on a real case, to be replaced by a real user quote after the interviews.)

You don't need to do anything to see the new choice. It appears automatically after a cancellation.

FAQ: questions from users

1. Is my money safe in the wallet? Can I take it out?
Yes. Wallet money can be withdrawn to your bank anytime. How fast the withdrawal is, and whether it has charges, is not confirmed yet and must be checked before launch.

2. What if I don't choose?
Your refund stays on hold, and we remind you. Most users open the app on the travel date to check their PNR status, so they will see it there. Proposed, not confirmed. Waiting without a limit could take longer than 7 working days, so a time limit may be needed.

3. Will I still be asked about my refund when I book a waitlisted ticket?
No. For waitlisted tickets the question moves to after cancellation. A short line at booking may still tell you the wallet refund is instant.

4. Can I change my choice after I confirm it?
No need. The refund is sent as soon as you confirm, so your choice is final. Proposed, to be checked with the technical team.

5. Does this apply to confirmed tickets?
No. For confirmed tickets the app already shows the refund choice when you cancel. This change is for waitlisted tickets.

6. Does this change my alternate-plan coupon?
No. This release only changes the refund choice. The coupon rules stay as they are and are the next item on our roadmap.

7. Will the bank refund become faster?
No. The original payment source still takes up to 7 working days, because that depends on the banks.

FAQ: questions from the team

8. Why ask after cancellation and not at booking?
At booking, a cancellation feels far away, so users answer without thinking and cannot change it later. After cancellation, the need for money is real.

9. How will we know it worked?
More users choose the wallet (main metric: wallet opt-in rate), and refund-related support contacts per 1,000 cancellations do not go up (guardrail).

10. What do we not know yet?
How fast and how costly a wallet-to-bank withdrawal is, what happens if a user never responds, and today's wallet usage. These are listed in PRD v1 and will be tested in interviews.
